Michael Landon's own story, starring

Timothy Patrick Murphy, Eli Wallach, and Anne Jackson.

Before he became one of television's greatest legends, actor Michael Landon was a shy boy named Eugene Orowitz who had a dream of doing something extraordinary. A small guy and the target of school bullies, Gene one day discovers he has an unsuspected talent as a javelin thrower. With dedication, determination, and the support of his father, he joins the track team and begins training for a school championship. He's on his way to setting a national record, which ultimately becomes his ticket to Hollywood and the extraordinary life he dreamed of. As an added bonus, a Jewish episode of "Little House on the Prairie" will conclude the afternoon.

Cost: $7 per person (UH members)

$8 per person (non-members)
